PICTURES FROM CATHEDRAL PEAK

Selected Poems

DAVID PAUL BOAZ
(DECHEN WANGDU)
For Kathleen Denzel Boaz and Denzel Deloris Massey
Contents

What Does it Matter What Poetry Is? .................. i for Gaia .............................................................. 1
Narrow is the Gate............................................. 2
Grace .................................................................... 3
Vidya Maya .......................................................... 4
Returning.............................................................. 5
Cogito (the bridge) ............................................. 6
Te Ra Cruciform ................................................... 8
Pele ....................................................................... 9
Just before dawn .............................................. 10
For People.......................................................... 11 rainbow bridge ................................................... 12 earth spirit ......................................................... 13
Only Hit ............................................................. 14
MU! ...................................................................... 15
Who is it? .......................................................... 16
the bright ............................................................ 17
Ox Tail ............................................................... 18
ten thousand waves ......................................... 19
Tao ........................................................................ 20
Identity .............................................................. 21
The Secret .......................................................... 22
the river ............................................................. 23
Is It Just Me Or Is It Hot in Here? ..................... 24
Crucible ............................................................. 25
Order .................................................................... 26
Before Genesis ................................................... 27
no matter ........................................................... 28
Hello and Goodbye.......................................... 29
Plucking the Fruit ............................................. 30 headpiece ........................................................... 31 Gone Beyond ...................................................... 32 flow ................................................................. 33
Lama Walks with Loma .................................... 34
the circle............................................................. 35
the touch ........................................................... 36
Being Here........................................................ 37 we are................................................................. 38
Sky Dancer .......................................................... 39
Good Company.................................................. 40
Roots .................................................................. 41
When We Dream ............................................... 42
Back Country..................................................... 43
My Blue Heaven ............................................... 44
Nocturne ............................................................. 45
The Teaching ...................................................... 46
Abundance.......................................................... 47
Autumn Wind ..................................................... 48
Christmas Eve Blizzard ..................................... 49
New Snow .......................................................... 50
Denali ................................................................. 51
An Old Hunter ..................................................... 52
whiteout ............................................................. 53
Generation .......................................................... 54 Climax ................................................................. 55
As To Polo .......................................................... 56
No Matter At All ............................................... 57
guru ................................................................. 58
Many Voices ....................................................... 59
Nothing Absent .................................................. 60 nyingpo ............................................................. 61 Shunyata ............................................................. 62
thank you .......................................................... 63
Voice ................................................................. 64
Tulips ................................................................. 65
puja ................................................................. 66
self portrait ......................................................... 67
Self Portrait ........................................................ 68
Consummation ................................................... 69
Vertigo ............................................................... 70
“It Ain’t No Big Deal” .......................................... 71
Stromata .............................................................. 72
Notice to Quit ..................................................... 73
Genes ................................................................. 74
For Coyote .......................................................... 75
Breath ................................................................. 76
What Does it Matter What Poetry Is?

What does it matter what poetry is, after all? All that matters is the eternal movement behind it.

—Dylan Thomas

What is this movement that matters? How may the poem reveal it? Enjoy it? Praise it?

Energy (prana, lung, ch’i, spiritus, pneuma) arises from its basal source as light or motion, a flux of continuous change. This ground or basis of motion is changeless Reality Itself. It has many names. None can describe it. It is simply primordial awareness, Consciousness Being Itself, the very sourceground of the eternal mystery of all that is.

So energy arises as light, motion, change, matter, life, mind, breath, voice. This great mystery cannot be grasped by the mind. It is profound. It utterly transcends yet embraces the understanding. Thus, the understanding may touch it. As the great tradition of humanity’s Primordial Wisdom Tradition attests, that Being Itself may be experienced directly as it is, prior to thought—concept and belief—by the feeling-emotional nature, at the Heart.

From such a ground the poem arises, with the mind, upon the breath, through the voice, witness to that primordial presence that all that is, arising as our relative spacetime realities, given each moment, each breath, from this primeval source of the great memory of our kind.

The heart of the soul is where the inner world and the outer world come to meet. At this boundary, it is present at every point.

—Novalis

Of this great mystery, the arising of light/energy/motion from its supreme source, there arises the Three Mysteries of the existence of Body, Voice and Mind. Voice is AH, the poem arising upon the breath-energy of the mind of the basal primordial awareness itself. Spirit-energy as voice links all beings together. Voice—vox, vak, vani—is Sarasvati, goddess mother, wife of Brahma the Creator, mirror and witness to all that arises in this Interbeing that is Dōgen’s Being-Time. Voice is the Hermetic/Orphic/Vedic/Hebrew song of God, divine voice, Corpus Hermeticum, OM our body together, animated by breath of all beings in this numinous participation in nondual godhead. This voice sings of the Orphic transcendence of the dualities of the Apollonian and the Dionysian, of being and becoming, of all binaries in their luminous sourceground—cittadhatu, Tāo—atavistic presence at the Heart (HUM). OM AH HUM. “Like that it is.”

For Nora Chadwick:

Everywhere the gift of poetry is inseparable from divine inspiration. Everywhere this inspiration carries with it knowledge... uttered in poetry which is accompanied by music... music is everywhere the medium of communication with spirit.

As form, our body arises from this perfectly subjective Spirit—apeiron, Tao, shunyata (emptiness)—Orphic voice as music/poetry reveals the truth of the mysteries: All things participate in That. We are not separate from That. Tat Tvam Ami, That, I Am!

And if that of the earth betrays you, say to the still earth: I flow. To the rushing water speak: I am.

—Rilke

For Sakyapa scholar-master Buton:

The voice of the Buddha arises, being called forth by the mind of all living beings.

Voice is mantra, breath of all-embracing Spirit descending and ascending throughout this great kosmic mandala, circulation of the light that holds us together in it. Voice is the instant self-liberating Ah! of experience. Voice is the shaman-poet-singer dwelling in mythtime at the root of attention, just prior to the world, in naked awareness, sings:

Everything is alive!
The trees, grasses, wind dancing, guides me. I understand the songs of the birds!

Voice is wind, breath of many voices deep within us. Listen to this wind through the silence as it carries us across the deep night.

In the Tibetan Buddhist Shambhala teachings the essential energy that gives rise to these mysteries of Body, Voice and Mind is Lungta, the Windhorse. Lung (wind/prana/energy) may be harnessed and ridden (ta/horse) via the wisdom teachings (sutras and tantras). Thus is the wild horse of the mind tamed. And the result/fruitition is drasbu, the realization of the numinous outshining prior unity of the apparent dualism of this continuum of arising energy forms. “Form is emptiness, emptiness is form.” Upon this breath the voice of the poem arises.

At its heart, the poem, like the many truths appearing through it, is transparent allowing us "to see and keep what the understanding touches intact—as grapes are round and come in bunches" (William Carlos Williams). Thus the poem arises through the still bright mirror of mind, reflecting appearances, witness to the supreme source, abiding always at the heart, prior to the perennial drama of Narcissus, the egoic self-contraction, causal knot that is our thought and physical form. Here, the life in the poem reveals who we are. Tat Tvam Asi, That Thou Art. The poem lives us. "One no longer dreams, one is dreamed" (Henri Michaux).

Because the poem springs from the very sourceground that is Being Itself in whom life arises, and because it is given, received and then given again upon the very breath-energy of this Being, it must be life affirming.

Poetry can do a hundred things... but there is only one thing that all poetry must do; it must praise all it can for being and for happening.

—W.H. Auden
The poem reconstitutes the naked immediacy of that “eternal movement” of energy given to sensation, perception and cognition into "news," or pictures, a way of seeing, little truths earthed or anchored in feeling. "Only the heart endures." The natural, innate intelligence of the poem, its form, its grace, its internal gravity exists in relation or tension with the naked image or idea of the thing directly perceived, samadhi of the ding an sich, the pristine, untainted neumenal thing-in-itself. This prior unity of image and idea, subject and object, noumenon and phenomenon is the relationship of the poem. Ultimately, it is the duality of this very relationship that we transcend on the transmental breeze that is the breath of the poem. The poem points to or intends the great Source, yet this source is not transcendent, but abides at the Heart as the always already present now of every arising form. Thus the poem itself cannot transcend everyday reality, and avoids transcendental logocentric absolutes (God). But it can illuminate the beauty of the natural things—ordinary mind—that is everyday reality. “Leave it as it is and rest your weary mind. All things are perfect exactly as they are” (Shakumuni, the Buddha).

The trouble with most poetry is that it is either subjective or objective.

—Basho

The poem prefers the naked natural image or idea of that perceived, to the abstract concept, ideal or sentiment of it. Abstraction betrays the natural direct image or idea.

Arising, musically, the diaphanous idea itself, the flower missing form all bouquets... To name the object is to delete three-quarters of the enjoyment of the poem... to suggest, to evoke, this is what charms the imagination... the poem is a mystery through which the reader finds his own way.

—Mallarmè

“My understanding has nothing to do with your understanding, (Hakuin Zenji).
For Wordsworth, the movement of this primordial energy through nature's forms "were all like workings of one mind, the features of the same face, blossoms upon one tree...” For Baudelaire, "nature is a temple where living pillars let secret words escape..." For Blake, "Energy is Eternal Delight."

Because the poem is given to be given again, "a poem on a page is only half a poem." To get the poem off the page it must be voiced, by the poet, or by the reader.

"Each poem is a performance as well as a script, the performance being both a realization and a criticism of the text."

—James Scully

The poem in this relation requires an opening to receive what is directly given, before it can be given again in the poem. This opening is prior to expression. This opening is a choice. Grasping, clinging and cognitive or spiritual seeking are not the poem. Poesis is process, not substance; receptive, not creative; nondual primordial wisdom (gnosis, jnana), not mere dualistic knowledge; openness, not activity; path, not goal. Thus the poem arises as we open, just for a moment to receive, surrender (wu wei, pistis/faith) and relax into the presence (vidya) of that always present, this primordial awareness ground that is our own original face. Here the poem is purely transparent, luminous and bright beyond the dualism—the binaries of relationship, of subject and object, you and me, spirit and matter. This post-transcendental, postmetaphysical understanding was told by Soto Zen Patriarch Dōgen 800 years ago:

Midnight. No waves
no wind. The empty boat flooded with moonlight.

—Dōgen Zenji

Thus the poem is Nemerov's "Protean Encounter", our coming to meet with the shape-shifting formless form of the eternal truths arising from transconceptual, nondual Spirit Itself. It is our primordial awareness wisdom that recognizes this wisdom presence—by whatever name—deep within each human Heart. All this, without excluding past and future, in the timeless now, through these little pictures that are the poem. These truths transmitted through the poem may be viewed as "what oft was thought, but ne'er so well expressed." (Pope). The truth of the poem is, for Keats, a remembrance "of one's own highest thoughts."

The work of art has always been to demonstrate and celebrate the interconnectedness: not to make everything "one" but to make the "many" authentic, to help illuminate it all.”

—Gary Snyder

Although the world's religions derive from sacred poetry, the poem itself cannot be conventionally or exoterically religious, and offers no consoling message or doctrinaire idea or image of the divine to which we may cling. Such a feelgood poem may serve as an appealing or inspiring sentiment, but cannot transmit the nondual, transconceptual ego-self-transcending truth that is our heart's desire. Yet, it is the esoteric/mystical tradition of the world's religions—religion as religio, yoga, union of spirit and matter—that provides the Orphic ideal of sacred, participatory self-transcending art that is the very essence of the poem itself.

It is the privilege of poetry to preserve us from mistaking our notions either for things or for ourselves. Poetry is the completest mode of utterance.

—I.A. Richards

Indeed, such art offers a brief antidote to those two great ego-ethnocentric evils of the modern/postmodern age: the separative violent dualism of religious provincialism, and life-denying, spirit-denying massmind Scientific Materialism (Scientism).
The greatest poetry sings always, at the end, of transcendence; while seeing clearly and saying plainly the wickedness and terror and beauty of the world, it is at the same time humming to itself, so that one overhears rather than hears: All will be well.

—Howard Nemerov

Yet, in order to suggest this ultimate truth of the ontic prior perfection of arising spacetime reality, poetry must also speak to the relative truth of the subtle impermanence of all things of the world, and to the fearful, destructive denial of this, the denial of our own death.

For Soto Zen Patriarch Dōgen Zenji, light energy motion is but an eternal continuum of the moment to moment arising, abiding and passing away—the change—that is being in time.

"Being is time." For our Great Wisdom Tradition then, being in the world is this temporal continuum of impermanent finite phenomenal reality arising from its infinite, changeless primordial awareness matrix base, our "supreme source"—by whatever name,—that is infinite Being Itself. And arising herein is our diaphanous impermanence that is the very essence of life and therefore of the Beautiful; is the soul of art, and of the poem itself. Thus does the poem reveal and celebrate this unborn, deathless luminous nature of mind, in the brightest and simplest of ways.

There are many ways of conceiving the poem. The history of criticism is full of them. Novalis speaks of the two stages of the self-expression of the poem: "The first stage is introspection; exclusive contemplation of the self. The second stage must be authentic observation outward, spontaneous sober observation of the external world." These two stages or aspects of the poem are the two faces of self-transcendence: self-observation, inward and upward (meditation/dhyana, zazen, gom), and compassionate ethical conduct, downward and outward (zenkan, gsal rig, jyodba), into the everyday lifeworld of sentient beings. The first stage is inward, non-conceptual contemplation and meditation upon the primordial wisdom presence—by whatever name—that is our actual identity. The second stage is bringing the "heaven" of this divine nature, into the "earth" of everyday lifeworld compassionate thought, speech and action; realizing and demonstrating the presence of our divine nature while "hewing wood and carrying water." And doing poetry. “What you are is what you have been; what you will be is what you do now” (Shakyamuni Buddha).

In due course, in the poem and in the individual, Narcissus, the self-limiting ego-I, and the selfless mahatman that is our actual noself are known to be identical, which was their essential nature from the very beginning. This is the non-dual view. "Seeing into one's self-nature is seeing into emptiness (shunyata)” (Hui-Neng). “Without past, present, future; empty awake mind” (Mipham Rinpoche).

Initially, the first stage is narcissistic. We are absorbed in ourselves, desiring, seeking something, reduced and seduced by our addictions to the material mass culture comfort zones of "not hearing" and "not seeing." When the poem arises at, or matures into the non-dual merging of the first and second stages, the egoic self cannot understand it. Here we long for the intense, the dramatic, the romantic, the beautiful, the conceptual or the ideal. We long for the comfortable but separate self-stimulating "I" of the poem. Egoic touchstone. Here the poem urges us to leave the house and enter in its numinous, transcendent brightness, beyond the trappings of our human sentimental and conceptual impedimenta. Here the poem mirrors its bright source behind or ontically prior to the reflected shadowy movement of its objects. Here, knowing subject and object known are not independent. Are not separate. Through the poem, just for a moment, we can be the mirror! Too often we stay in the house.

The poet’s eye, in a fine frenzy rolling, doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth to heaven.

—Wm. Shakespeare

When Rilke understood that his poems lacked the authentic, transcendent "seeing" (satori, zenkan) of the images of the objects of the external world, he began his "seeing poems," and lost much of his following. But the images and poems became transparent, and revealed little pith pictures of their bright source.

In the initial narcissism of the first stage, the poem often omits the object, or the image of the object altogether; or the direct "thing in itself" is lost midway to the intuitive, introspective "I."

If the senses are called upon only to embody intuition about ourselves, they die. They don't want to be slaves of our intuition.

—Robert Bly

I should be content to look at a mountain for what it is, and not a comment on my life.

—David Ignatow

Thus the "I poem" gives us "news" of the primordial voice of the mind as intuited by the fearful, grasping compensatory egoic structures of the personality-self. The I poem grounds itself in the realm of Narcissus, the ego-I, which is old news insofar as the ego, by definition, has separated itself from the supreme source of the mind—by whatever name—through which it arises. The I poem often reveals this aesthetic ego, the antithesis of participatory self-transcending art. Such art is all too rare.

The human realm is truly interesting only as a part, a participation or an outpicturing of natural things, that profound and ultimate mystery of nature, that luminous empty silence through which nature's appearances arise. The subtle, emotive spontaneous context of the poem itself must intend That (Tat/Sat).

Only that which does not teach, which does not cry out, which does not persuade, which does not condescend, which does not explain, is irresistible.

—W.B. Yeats.

Such a poem, in contrast to the I poem, is a "mind poem" in that it does not derive from the fear and desire of Narcissus, the ego-I. It does not seek to teach, persuade, enhance or dramatize. It seeks nothing at all. Rather, the mind poem reveals and transmits news of the primordial source of the mind, little pictures of the great mystery of the essence of the luminous nature of mind that is ontologically interdependent Being Itself (Interbeing) in which or in whom this all arises. The mind poem intends and is grounded in, and facilitates our participation, recognition then realization of That. Why? Because that is our actual identity. That is who we are.

Everything is already accomplished. The nature of mind is Buddha from the beginning.

—Garab Dorje

If all nature, everything, is Buddha from the beginning, then the poem is ordinary, "nothing special" (wu shin). "The ideas of a poet should be noble and simple" (Tu Fu).

This apparent self that is Narcissus does not live in reality. It dwells in its self-created mythology, the skeptical and alienated mythos of the commodified materialist massmind. While the dualistic intelligence of Narcissus identifies and defends the limits of its habitual perceptual, conceptual and belief systems, the mind poem provides an antidote: the "beginners mind" (shoshin) the momentary "bracketing" (epoché) or placing in abeyance of our constitutive cognitive operations upon reality, such that we may open to receive what reality gives directly, prior to the filtering of it through the atavistic logical and conceptual elaborations and operations of the linear, bivalent, bipolar perceptual and conceptual cognitive structures from which our dualistic languages are derived. "Who are you between two thoughts?" Who is it that shines through the mind and abides at the heart of all beings, forever liberated and fully awake? The mind poem intends That.

The mind poem then, may transcend the ego-I, its destructive denial of death, and even the mind itself, referring or pointing back to that presence which is always present (vidya), witness to that numinous matrix/base of the mind itself. Here egoic existence and the very essence or nature of mind are a prior unity. And now, at last we can see it, and know it, and be it beyond any doubt. The mind poem intends That.
The mind poem may be a poem of images of things, or a poem of ideas, objective or subjective, but it always refers to or intends or notices in some small way, directly, beyond sentiment, concept or belief, through natural things the great mystery that is given nakedly and directly to the mind through the senses and the Heart. This inherent intentionality of the poem does not require or presuppose any epistemology or ontology, or any conceptual structure, elaboration or dilemma whatsoever. It is simply the transconceptual, pristine, direct and subtle witnessing or Praising of the self-liberated movement/energy of this great mystery that is the interdependent, unseparate bright source of mind, precisely at the instant of its arising, and nothing more. It is merely That, that is to be experienced and realized through the poem itself.

Pictures From Cathedral Peak is a selection of little pictures of that great mystery; little mind poems, and didactic I poems, arising upon the voice of the mind, bright mirror of That which abides just prior, That which transcends yet embraces it, deep in the silence in whom everything arises.

Cathedral Peak is a great granite spire arising from the California High Sierra, just across the trail from Cathedral Lake—a magical, pristine alpine lake—two day’s hike or ski from Yosemite Valley. Cathedral Peak is a place in the mind where this presence of the primordial source of the mind is strong and bright.
for Gaia

my dearest madam with your whiterose breasts almond eyes afire

here’s a belated but earnest plea to free your lovers and your poets from airy whores of ideality to work with power and light polemic streets and brothels of clamorous reality

Narrow is the Gate
(at Hanakapei Beach)

I'll come here and build a hut just upstream below the falls alone for a few months.

In sun and cool moon fog sit in warm pool and think of perfectly nothing

Naked shining in the light sing and dance perchance to die here.

Chaos of joy now sleep in orchids and ginger with only the whispering water.
Grace
(at Puuhonua O Honaunau Place of Refuge, Hawaii)

Day ends in fine misty rain.
Descended from new mountains it deepens fluent black lava fingers meeting endless salty waves.

Listen.
Great spirits move now in ancient earth.

Here wise men and murderers were lifted up together just for a moment
free to move.

Now we glad rosy waves
warm rain on our faces receive this peace.

New warriors for earth arise arise to meet this fearful night.
Early in the morning in predawn darkness we sit together enchanted
in the silence.

In spring we rise up brew strong tea. Warm Kona winds portend the storm.
Misty rainglow upon our hut.

In summer the sky is nearly black inviolate abyss palpable.
Windriven rain drenches the island.
Fire in the stove a crucible.

By twilight a watery deluge has engulfed the world.
Our fire rises up the roof nearly gone.

In winter all that is a fiery maelstrom.
All that we are surrendered to the storm.

Now at dawn burnt ashes.
Bright moon sets over silvery sea.
As light fills the world we sit together
enchanted in the silence.
Returning

Returning late
from Hanalua Bay.
I see you sleeping in tropical heat wet and bright
in soft moonlight.

I should sit alone
tonight with that moon but press my face to your sweet belly.

You awake gently urge me inside
again to earth.
Cogito
(the bridge)

To know “the love which moves the sun and stars.”
——Dante Alighieri

i

Hanalua Bay
beneath feathery Ironwoods pulsing white clouds that old blue dream of tropical sky

Sun and earth and endless salty waves whorls and eddies in eternal wind all celebrate

Infinite mass to the light and its darkness silent creator
and destroyer of worlds

Celebrate our light ascending through warm rain descending upon this luscious form
singular body of god Through thought this form intends that one prior and perfect ground filigree of airy garments skyblue body of god

Joy and hurt
through this form is love time-threaded heartstrings binding the worlds great heart of the body of god

Hanalu Bay
tonight a little beach fire crucible of earth
so sweet the woodsmoke
Te Ra Cruciform

(Ke Kau O na Kea, Ki‘i O akua Cross of Lono, presence of God)

From Haleakala summit beyond ancient red cinder cones across the Alenuihaha Channel horizon Mauna Kea vertical thrust up from womb of Uri-Isis great phallus of Yahweh-Ra-Kane praised by Cetaceans and wisemen and known to the Sun.

Perfect Mauna Kea in cold wind.
Tropical snow touches deep blue sky.
Earth meets heaven
a cross in the mandala.
Pele
(at Halemaumau)

Steamy sulfury moonscape takes my breath becomes soft wind rattling bamboo
in cool rainforest
above the falls
where she waits
in orchids and ginger
I am now.
Just before dawn
we sit alone in the bath in a gentle rain.
The Night Blooming Jasmine perfumes the warm air.
My little cats are asleep.
There is no sound but soft rain.
Remember the night
we loved in such joy that we couldn’t stop crying?
For People

Ah People!
Big brains big hearts small minds weak backs

We will not be happy And like cats we don’t last

nor do avatars
nor planets
nor even stars
if you think about it

Yet we are this light rainbow bridge
(for Alan Watts)

from love’s sorrow
joy harmony
confusion escape

utterly through being that given now swaddled in moonlight

paradox of peace
clear brightness of our laughter
earth spirit
(after Navajo prayer)

I am spirit in earth all in beauty

earth
my legs in earth all in beauty

earth
my heart in earth
all in beauty

rainbow earth my mind

now my voice in wind and light

all in beauty
all in light
Only Hit
(for Roshi)

Attention!
Gird up your loins.
We’re off to see
untainted rose of truth.

Fear, unbidden not unwelcome is the rub polishes the tile
this perfect dance.

“All that can be shaken shall be shaken.”
Bright world opening only shines
all the way to the end of it.
MU!

surrendered utterly prior unity that rose that all that is not this bright face in quiet moonlight
Who is it?

Who is it that desires to know and to be happy?
Who is it that is afraid and angry?
Who is it that is born suffers and dies?
Who is it that shines through the mind and abides at the heart of all beings always liberated and fully awake?
the bright

sunface Buddha moonface Buddha everyone Buddha everything Buddha one face
all buddha yes
so beautiful Ox Tail

Tat tvam ami
that I am
ezennier than thou
as categories harden stonier than stone Maui Merriott Buddha cannot hear Joshu’s dog clapping
mu thru the silence Just so have a beer
ten thousand waves

(for Suzuki Roshi)

sit in the bath think about time

sakura sakura
sweet koto memory

the more I think the sadder I get

shoshaku jushaku shin ku myo u

night rain cool
upon my head
Tao
(after Lao Tsu, Tao Te Ching, Chapter XXV)

There is that being itself
Prior to heaven and earth.
In stillness it abides.
Ever changeless it is also becoming.
It is Mother of forms rising.
It can have no name.
We may call it God
But it is only Tao.

Tao continues to infinity
But is always here.
In a circle all follow this way.
We follow earth
Who follows heaven
Who follows Tao
That only being
That we always are.
Identity

“…and we enter into relation with the light of the gods.”
—Ta Chuan, I Ching

now
we are bright waves flowing like the river through abundant forest coming to meet
by the lake delivered in gentle wind at peace
at the still mountain in the good earth in the crucible of the sun in infinite sky in that great love we are now
The Secret

(for Ari)

A month before you died while reading Lewis Carroll together you asked, “What is the true secret?” Not knowing I replied “It lies beyond our thoughts about it.” You said “I heard it once and I know what it is but I’m not supposed to tell.”
the river

from deep sleep night river rises streams fantasque
throughout the dream infolded bright cascade I flow carried away arise again forever
awake.
Is It Just Me
Or Is It Hot in Here?

In the beginning was probably some cool dark stochastic little photon of ineffable awareness in deep silent night.

Sloughed off from god knows what and for perhaps no purpose at all one of the first monads is.

The old Vedas Genesis and postmodern metaphysics agree the resulting flash and bang took until just now to get here.

That’s why reality
moves so fast and every thing seems to die.
A fiery flux chaos
is an orderly situation.

Bright Spring morning.
In the wasteland birds sing.
And here are wildflowers
And frantic people to love.
Crucible

“We are a sun and a moon and a heaven filled with stars” —Paracelsus

this light in the sun is life in a cell

is fiery galaxies burning at 3° kelvin

stellar alchemy utterly empty burns brightly
as trees and stars

is this light
we are now
Order

“Certain bounds hold against chaos.”
—Robert Duncan

Thermodynamically speaking time is running out will consume us all everything utterly devoured.

Order to chaos

entropy of reality

nihilistic protocols postmodern metaphysics.

In whom does this time arise?

Before Genesis

Before genesis was great peace. But now what'll we do? In a jiffy, an archetypal Cetacean (from a parallel universe) advises: “Contemplate the quantum emptiness of all That is. Be this dizzy spinning fugue rising recursive crescendo cascade ex nihilo. Be the fiery pulse of it. All that is after all only us diaphanous body arising playing in light of the eye of the beholder.”
no matter

“…say to the still earth: I flow.
To the rushing water speak: I am.”
—Rilke

fractured symmetries broken promises
the quantum dice are thrown objectivity & causality are kaput

yet arising the things in this light

it takes two to tango
but the crux of the matter is the singular spin of the software
of mind
ruddy bright waves encoding awareness of the paradox of light in the particle of the form of the implicate order of the whole

that one lives us no matter at all Hello and Goodbye

Lying here naked shining in the great love deep inside were scared as hell.

Sweet scent our body together our breath already consumed by grace we have it at all.

Masters say surrender each thing the moment good or bad let it be.

Some sunny day we'll give it up sacrifice our effort choose to be goodbye
and hello all the time.
Plucking the Fruit

“Tu souleveras le Rideau Et maintenant voila que s’ouvre la fenetre” —Apollinaire

“The window opens like an orange lovely fruit of light”
streams like breath through this aperture to perfect the luscious form.

O lift the veil and taste and touch each touch afire
each orb a sun
each sun an opening
like an orange
lovely fruit of light.
light a light
   to heads of state to headshinks
   to head hunters to head trippers
   to dickheads

   yes heads everywhere mirror Eliot’s headpiece filled with straw cerebral gleaners reap dark images of perfection never enough

   so wise up and get rational

   light a light at the crown of the head

   and the whole body shall be full of light Gone Beyond

Twenty years ago she said “You have the heart of a yogi the mind of a philosopher.
I hope you get it right.”
Incommensurable paradigms?

Now she’s gone. My horses gone. My youth gone.
Most of my self gone gone beyond. Yet this impetuous brightness.
flow

I cannot hold you beloved for even now you're gone gently in weeping rain somewhere to remember again Lama Walks with Loma
(for Rinpoche)

Cold rainy morning sit before this wise old face a thousand suns
bright is my face all enfolded perfect space

Tonight lotus moon sit in snowy wind weep for hours
all unfolds outshines glad Mantra I am now
the circle

endless circle our breath days seasons kalpas arising ceasing here this blue eyed little lupine
the touch
(for Carol)

through this we arise from the dream

I am you luminous bodies yabyum dance

descend on our breath

bright river arrive forever at the heart
In the end the beginning.
Alpha omega each breath.
In May bright roses rise from deep silent night
many voices here
among the stars
In October wistful roses wither fall with autumn leaves return to empty silent night.
These colors here
all the light that moves the worlds
we are
rosy salty waves so bright luminous ones consume the night

great love that binds the worlds lifts and heals
we are this light Sky Dancer

(for Gabriela)

In this lovely rosette of the mind we dance in the delicate clouds.
Can we be this presence that space of sky
in the bloom of our splendent earth?
Good Company

Wesak moon tonight condone our gentle self-congratulations.

This sad face put on Narcissus folly heart failure to be.

Charcot once spoke to young Freud “See the data again and again until they themselves begin to speak.”

Said Jesus “The rest shall be added unto you.”

And long before “Wonder of wonders all beings are Buddha.”

Remembering again we laughed and cried for we knew we had forgotten.
Roots
(for Kathy)

“The joy we share as we tarry there” arises this alchemy of light upon dry red dirt at dusk on the 7th day outside Jackson.

Kathy and me, with the old folks and pea pickers sing “I Am His Own.” This our body risen in light walks with me then and again through the valley at the bright water
at dawn.
When We Dream

When you laugh in your sleep
I hear seed syllable old mantram AH HA!

When we sang OH AM HA!
Arising on paleographic wings from deepest silent night

When ego and eros were just this breath arisen from primeval sleep

Now when we dream and laugh out loud Back Country

The water is cold
mirrors sun and moon.
In these new mountains
live wise old spirits.
They speak through wind in the pines if you listen.
The white clouds and little flowers will keep you safe
My Blue Heaven

Long Summer’s night at Cathedral Peak.
The day’s trials past.

My last log dims falling falling sleep.

Ho! Sudden crack!
Hot sparks upon my feet!

Ha! Awake!
Yogic fire up the middle wondrous leap of worlds.
Good boy!

O treachery pride.
Give up that and that all the way
to the end of it.
Nocturne

Bright moon on Bear Creek Spire.
Late October snow covers my tent.
The wind blowing down from Morgan Pass is cold. Smells clean like winter.

Next month the lakes will freeze.
Then I’ll ski the bowls above Dade Lake.
Tonight this presence is strong and bright in my heart.
The Teaching

Autumn snow on Cathedral Peak. But I miss gigantic sweet cherries we ate last summer.

My fire is warm. Then the ashes. There is nothing at all that I know.

These old mountains. Listen. Wind and water rive primeval granite.

There is nothing at all that I am. Now wet new snow upon my face.
Abundance

Cold October dawn.
Alpenglo on Cathedral Peak.
Three day’s rations now in the bellies of an old sow
and her cub.
My breakfast
water and chocolate bars.
We laugh together
in abundant earth.
In whom does this all arise?
Autumn Wind

October again.
Smell it in the wind?
Thin mountain air
makes me see stars.
Icy water numbs my hands.
My hut flooded with Autumn sun.

Evening alpenglow on Bear Creek Spire
and new snow.
Early winter in the high meadows.
Deer and bear prepare.

For a billion Autumns these great mountains arise and fall in this eternal wind
breath of one who holds this all gently in the hands.
Christmas Eve Blizzard
(for Linda)

Two days whiteout near Mammoth Pass.
White wind
High Sierra sings “Cast out our sin and enter in”
this old carol rings
a touchstone.

God is metaphor
yes is love
light of the world
breath of many voices deep within us speak and enter in now when we listen to the wind.
New Snow

(after Osarqaq, Inuit poet)

Wondrous to see these old mountains
fill with new snow.

Great Earth infinity.
Her seasons
lift me upward
fill me with joy.

These old mountains.
The pure whiteness.
Wondrous to be.
Yai ya yaia!
Denali

Pale old winter sun
over Denali.
Soft redgold shades
early evening alpenglo.
The white wind is still.

From a great height bears and wolves
rule this earth.
Aperture.
Just for a moment
perfect peace.
An Old Hunter
(for Dersu Uzala)

Sun and Moon are powerful men.
If one of them dies
all beings will die.

Wind and water and fire are old men and powerful too.
In fire the forest is reborn.
Wind and water give us life.

In my fire tonight I see long ago my home and garden in spring all in blossoms and light.

Now I am old
and my wife is gone.
But we will meet again.

Winter is here.
Soon I will be buried in new snow.
whiteout

cathedral peak white days alone and cold black nights

thin air
mind at the margin

now
I am that pure white

I am here
at dawn
all the color in the light that fills the world Ancient Thule people traveled 3000 Arctic miles in supple skin boats still hunt whales in icy seas sing in smoky twilight about love beneath this pale old sun
who never sets Climax

(for Lou Welch)

Ancient granite primeval ice eternal wind
do you know
vast boreal forests as they rise and fall in your infinite seasons?
As To Polo

500 years before Jesus Cyrus and young Darius used our human heads less brain case contents as polo balls.

One wonders how given that obliquity peculiar to our Homo skull one would ever hit the bloody thing straight!
No Matter At All

One snow-flurried night in Lone Pine
I stopped by a sleepy cattle truck to talk with a beefy Hereford.

Felling guilty
I said “I’m sorry pal.”
His eyes blazed electric blue and spoke

“No matter
we are food together all consumed
no matter at all.”
guru
from time to time
these precious old beings blow your mind utterly demolish all reasonable strategies who you are gone threadbare reticulum sit by grace if you're lucky bright mirror that you from time to time
Many Voices

In the East
Summer moon rises full over Sandia Crest

Pale horse cock crows
dogs bark

Sundown colors dance through earthy air and rain

These many voices whole body full of light
Nothing Absent
(for Adi Da Samraj)

Midnight.
April rain.
Solace of rain.
Peacock’s cry away off.
“What is absent from your happiness?” haunts me. Tat Tvam Asi.
Eternal mystery That “flower absent from all bouquets” already present forgotten to remember again.

5:00 A.M. Again the dawn.
Thunder from Sandia Crest.
Wet Juniper in the wind.
“Submit Now To Be That!”
Be that one always perfectly obvious
I Am. Tat Tvam Ami.
Tam Aham Bajami.
“God cannot possibly be hidden.”
Nothing absent
from our happiness.
ningpo

give up again
a dream abright
along a rosy way to give our heart
away asleep awhile

it is as if we all were not at all that one left out in rain a rose arise a song

from deepest downy spacious heart awake I dreamed primeval dream
O heart enwombed receive a one from whom all roses open are

I am again
Shunyata

The crux of the matter.
More stable than mountains it abides at the heart of everything.
Through love and time it waits in silence at the margin beckons us across to the shadow realm aperture
to our source.
thank you (for Beth)

from above earth receives sun and wind
gives me breath fills my spaces with light opens me to receive who you are

I give you poems and a red rose Voice
(for Russell Paul Schofield)

Listen to the wind, and the twittering death at the bottom and the top of each breath.
Open this burning door each now enter in a secret place that deep sweet dream of sleep wherein we are a bell ringing the end again and again in bright silent night.

Listen to the wind, and the twittering death as the sun rises and sets upon the brushwork of our lives this silk itself embedded in lovely rosette of the mind.
Open this burning door enter in dark house of the moon.
Here embrace the monstrous shadow spread upon the face of all that is. For there is no other. Vani, Tat tvam ami.
This great wind sweeps us across the deep night.

Listen to the wind, and the twittering death within this breath of all that forms and moves fugue of roses and butterflies cascades and falls like falling stars broken symmetries we are risen each breath angelus of light to meet that fearful night.
Thus do we enter in and shine ever at the Heart when we listen to the wind.
Tulips
(for Paul Boyd Boaz)

Tulips in old Mimi’s garden.
Many colors. “Blessings” she called them round our lives. In spring fill us up.
In Winter too when we will not receive.
“By Grace” she said
“We shall have our tulips.”

Horseshit she threw upon the little bulbs.
It smelled like dirt. Like earth.
Like earthworms in a can. Oligochaeta who turn the sweet humus for us.
All of it carbon from the stars stainless ground of all that is.

After the rain when the air was sweet with earth those worms would copulate hermaphroditically
under the old rose trellis.
“See that!” said old Paul laughing.
“They’re stuck on each other and that’s what gives us the corn and the trees. You’ve got one of them in your pants right now!”

That seed in me.
Flesh water breath. Stardust actually.
Seed planted here goes on through small pelvises and big brains.
Sweet nipples give the calories. Goes on in horses and worms. In perfect spring tulips.
All these many colors
here among the stars.
puja

(for Carol)

jasmine and quiet rain embrace us
sweet earth our body together
self portrait

amateur mystic macho mind warrior interdimensional dilettante and gourmand
of cosmic stuff always here in love with earth
Self Portrait

Middling old yogi amateur philosopher
not much of a poet

May I just be for someone a dear friend Consummation

Gentle cooking for heaven in earth the samadhi of the Anschuung

(for Salvador Dali)

Alchemically speaking we must eat all that given.

Mythtime fruits and pits edible grist these “atavistic vestiges” linear sins of generations form a crutch that is a cross bright imprint endlessly upon the whole old cabal “delirious reality” itself.

Earthtime roses and flies consumed fiery crucible of desire distills Proustian egg divine womblike citadel of mind descends vortically lifts our vernal earth from time her nubile hypercubic gooseflesh ripe greeny fig opened by the sun.

And the pits pricey pearls philosopher’s stones devoutly wished essence these sins in earth little sweets of heaven.
Vertigo

In the first grade old Miss Gibson screamed “You’re stupid!, stupid!” when I froze up in the reading circle. Screamed “Stupid!” at me. Later I joined Mensa taught philosophy got a guru.

This fear is a circle. Aches in my back. Spins on and on in the head. Spinning meatwheel vertigo smells like cotton candy. Old Burgundy. Ripe strawberries in summer when you remember.

In every dimension a line becomes a circle wistful silence whispering the end. Some kind of brightness binds us together in it. Curious order spins on and on.

Trees and biomass keep us safe from solar radiation. Give each one time to attend to opening. Some sunny day perhaps today we will all shine with it.
“It Ain’t No Big Deal”
(for Patrick and Jerry)

“All of this, yet to die.”
All of this gone
gone utterly beyond.
Before the light primordial darkness perfect womb of all that is. Yes return to the light and its liberating darkness.
Now return again awake and heal unbroken perfect worlds.
Stromata

(Quartet in A Minor)

In the end the beginning.
Alpha Omega the cycles.
Fragments of the whole.
Our hope in a minor key.

In Autumn’s drizzle
wet roses wither.
Brief antidote given through the light emblem of our starry root specter of the coming night.

Clamorous reality binds us to the wheel.
Yet at the heart
this impetuous brightness.

Flooded with Spring
glad tulips arise.
“Verde que te quiero verde.”
Cycles and pauses filled with nothing but space.

Arising herein
a garden of light.
O wonder of wonders
all beings delight!
Notice to Quit

Now is the time to quit trying to be

As it is already liberated
now is the time
to give up

As it is already present
now is the time
to enter in Perfect as it is now is the time

to be Genes

“Yesterday’s buds are today’s blossoms which we draw with a brush on silk.”
—Lu Chi

Eternal totems vortical descend through voice of sky penetrate abrosial womb imprint the dazzling form.

Mythtime messengers alive bear seeds of our salvation lightly on Lepidoptera wings encode the sacred carbon.

In salt and blood these earth elements burn brightly with trees and stars.

Mute music of tomorrow in fiery seeds from above deep within us.
For Coyote
(for Gary Snyder)

I know you Coyote.
You eat my cats
and the rabbits
even skunks!
Everything!
Eat it all up!

Great earth consumed.
Only you sly coyote survive this chaos
as we cycle together celebrate your song

tonight to the moon
tomorrow the dawn to laughing earth to luminous sun
to wondrous stars
all forever Coyote.
Breath

Summer moon rises
full over the Panamints.

Warm desert wind
whisper of wind.

In the distance
heat lightning brightens redgold shadow peaks.

Flow up still earth
arise to meet the perfect night.

Here soar off the edge
deep blue space.

Sweet wet sage
in the wind.
Breathe it in.

I am lived everywhere at once.